Dear Mr. Joshi,

In reference to the Notice of Proposed Rule Making to Title 59, Part 830 of the Code of Federal Regulations, some rotorblade strikes may not be substantial enough to warrant repair, let alone the trouble and expense (both to owner/operators and the government entity) that would be needed to deal with such occurrences. I feel that minor occurrences, that may involve something as minor as a visual inspection, would be an unnecessary expense and time consuming ordeal and some common sense approach by the operator/maintenance personnel would be better well served.

Thank you for your time and attention.

Sincerely,

James E. Robinson
